WEBJET COMPLETES ZUJI PLATFORM RE-ENGINEERING

Webjet today announced the final stages of the Zuji operating platform re-engineering has been completed.

Elaborating, Webjet's Managing Director, John Guscic, said:

"We have now transitioned the Zuji sites in Australia, Singapore and Hong Kong onto Webjet's latest Cloud based booking application, along with its associated links to its preferred Global Distribution System and provider of air content, Travelport, resulting in the broadest and most comprehensive air content available in the region.

The new sites provide enhanced user experience through the streamlined workflow which reduces time to book, improved the content and range in the packages area, and upgraded filtering and multiple date range shopping features.

The new platform also delivers a material increase in hotel content available, as a result of the existing Webjet hotel relationships.

The full product range on all sites will continue to be expanded over the next few weeks.

Most importantly, as part of these changes, the Zuji service centre operations have been integrated into our high quality control service centres, which will provide the foundation for a closely monitored, high calibre service delivery. Furthermore, the service offering has been expanded to 24x7 for all functions in Australia and Singapore, with Hong Kong transitioning to full 24x7 coverage in the first quarter of next year.

The completion of these arrangements eliminates transition services costs from Travelocity and further eliminates duplicated costs in service centres with increased economy of scale.

With this engineering now completed, the full brand promotion of Zuji in Singapore, Australia and Hong Kong will commence shortly with clear brand differentiations in the different markets."
