Aspermont Limited : Board Changes

Aspermont Limited (ASX: ASP), the global media services provider to the resources industry, today announces that Non-Executive Directors, John Stark, Colm O'Brien and Rod Whyte are to step down from the Board with immediate effect.

John Stark retires after 15 years of unselfish service to the Company having played a key role in maintaining excellent relationships with investors who have supported Aspermont through challenging times.

Colm O'Brien steps down after 12 years with the company, including 9 as director. He was invaluable in helping transform the Company from a local print player into a global business with a footprint in many different markets.

Rod Whyte will step down after working tirelessly for the Board over the last four years and having played an instrumental part in identifying and securing Aspermont's most strategic acquisition to date, Mining Journal, the premier mining publication.

Chairman of Aspermont Limited, Andrew Kent said:

"We would like to thank all three Directors for their invaluable contribution to Aspermont over many years, helping us to become today the leading global media services provider to the mining and resources industry. They leave us well positioned for our next phase of organic growth."
