Market commentary

Global infrastructure stocks (up +3.4% in A$ terms) and broader equities (up +5.2%) posted robust gains in November, driven largely by strong US market performance following the clear outcome of the US election. With the Trump administration's focus on deregulation and potential tax cuts, the more economically-sensitive infrastructure subsectors were among the best performers.

Midstream Energy stocks led the way bolstered by a potentially more favourable environment for energy and increased economic growth. Railways also performed well after the election, although US-based railways outperformed their Canadian counterparts which were hampered by the potentially adverse effects of Trump's mooted tariffs.

Conversely, Electric Utilities rose but lagged the broader asset class as investors generally overlooked stocks with more defensive characteristics.
